The Life

…getting them up in the morning, clothing them, cooking breakfast, getting a bottle ready, fighting him during the morning routine, getting out of the house on time, driving to daycare, the tears goodbye,going to the grocery store, cooking lunch and dinner, cleaning top to bottom, washing dishes and clothes, going swimming, fighting traffic, working 8 hours with you brain exploding, consoling him, doing the night routine, the exhaustion the exhaustion the exhaustion, the bath, changing clothes into pj, don't forget reading books and brushing his teeth, rocking him to sleep, the battle there after, trying to teach them how to love and give love, and so much more, so much more…let's not forget to be happy, this is the life we always wanted and so we make a joyful sound, awakening the stars which we sleep under, tired, hoping for a good night's sleep.
